

Call for Papers

New | 2017

We are delighted to announce that Libraries: Culture, History, and Society is now accepting submissions! Launching in Spring 2017, LCHS is a semiannual peer-reviewed publication from the Library History Round Table of the American Library Association and the Penn State University Press. LCHS will be available in print and online via JSTOR and Project Muse.

The only journal in the United States devoted to library history, LCHS positions library history as its own field of scholarship, while promoting innovative cross-disciplinary research on libraries' relationships with their unique environments. LCHS brings together scholars from many disciplines to examine the history of libraries as institutions, collections, and services, as well as the experiences of library workers and users. There are no limits of time and space, and libraries of every type are included (private, public, corporate, and academic libraries, special collections and manuscripts). In addition to library science, the journal welcomes contributors from history, English, literary studies, sociology, education, gender/women's studies, race/ethnic studies, philosophy, political science, architecture, anthropology, geography, economics, and other disciplines.

Manuscripts may be submitted electronically through LCHS's Editorial Manager system at the URL below. They must also conform to the instructions for authors found on the same URL.

We are excited to see this journal become a reality and welcome your thoughts (and submissions!) as we create a new platform for studying libraries within their broader humanistic and social contexts. For further questions, please contact the editors: Bernadette Lear, BAL19@psu.edu, and Eric Novotny, ECN1@psu.edu.
